

5. Why can't a third party, like a mediator, force the Board and the CTEA to come to an agreement?

- Currently, New Jersey laws does not give any third party, mediator, fact finder or super conciliator, the authority or ability to derive and enforce a settlement between two negotiating parties. The parties must come to a mutually acceptable agreement for it to become a binding contract.