 - Schedule snacks and lunch
 - Plan for playtime outside, weather permitting
- Read with your child each day
 - Face to face
 - Also, audio books online (<https://www.storylineonline.net/>)
- Making learning fun throughout the day:
 - Model and ask your child to perform activity ("Do this"), step by step
 - Activities should be functional and fun
 - Try hands on activities (e.g., following a recipe, simple experiments)
 - Regular household activities (e.g., setting the table, planting for spring)
 - Use visual cues, written instructions, written schedules to help your child follow day-to-activities and follow directions
 - Have your child doing and moving - practice labeling and identifying items and activities
 - Try to find everyday activities to do with your child that your child finds interesting/fun and then use that to build skills
- Tips for best results:
 - Before giving instructions, your child should be facing and looking at you
 - Prompt before repeating a direction
 - Repeat activities a few times each week - practice, practice, practice!
 - Choose activities that are your child's area of interest and competence
 - Praise verbally, with high fives, hugs, kisses, etc., when your child is successful and doing what you want them to do!
